BEAUFIGHTER CRASH

A war-time crash, and the way a Rolex watch survived it, is the subject of Mr. S. W. Martin's letter addressed to The Rolex Watch Co., Ltd., Geneva, Switzerland.

"I bought Rolex Oyster Rafeigh No. 162275/3478 in March 1942 in Weyburn, Saskatchewan, where I was serving as a Flying Instructor In the Royal Air Force. The watch was never off my wrist and gave perfect service, but its biggest test came in August 1944, when was flying Beaufighters in Coastal Command. Returning from a mission, on one engine, I had to crash-land in a small field. It was presty rough landing and the Beau immediately caught fire and blaw up. Needless to say I got put as quickly as possible, but suffered burns which kept me in hospital for nearly a year. Traditionally, the watch should have stopped at the exact time of the crash - the Rolex, following its own traditions, kept going. It ran down normally, and when I was sufficiently interested in things to have it rewound some weeks later, it carried on keeping perfect time. That there is still, eleven years after the crash, an unscarred ring on my left wrist will give you some idea of what the watch survived. BOMB:

These diagrams tell the story

By CHAPMAN PINCHER

THE ATOM BOMB—perhaps 20ft, long and oft, wide—is seen on the left, mounted in the bomb-bay of the B.47 jet-plane—and then failing out over South Carolina. The sketch on the right explains why the bomb exploded at all and why it did not produce an atomic blast.

The core of the atom bomb consists of a hollow sphere of plutonium atomic explosive, surrounded by a series of specially shaped charges of ordinary T.N.T. high explosive.

When the bomb is deliberately detonated all the T.N.T. charges go off simultaneously, directing their explosive power inwards on the plutonium sphere and compressing it into a solid ball.

In this solid form the plutonium will explode provided that a further small atomic device is present to produce a stream of atomic particles which trigger off the giant blast.

This triggering device, called the Urchinand omitted from the sketch for security reasons -- is NOT inserted until the plane is approaching its target on an operational flight.

The safety margin

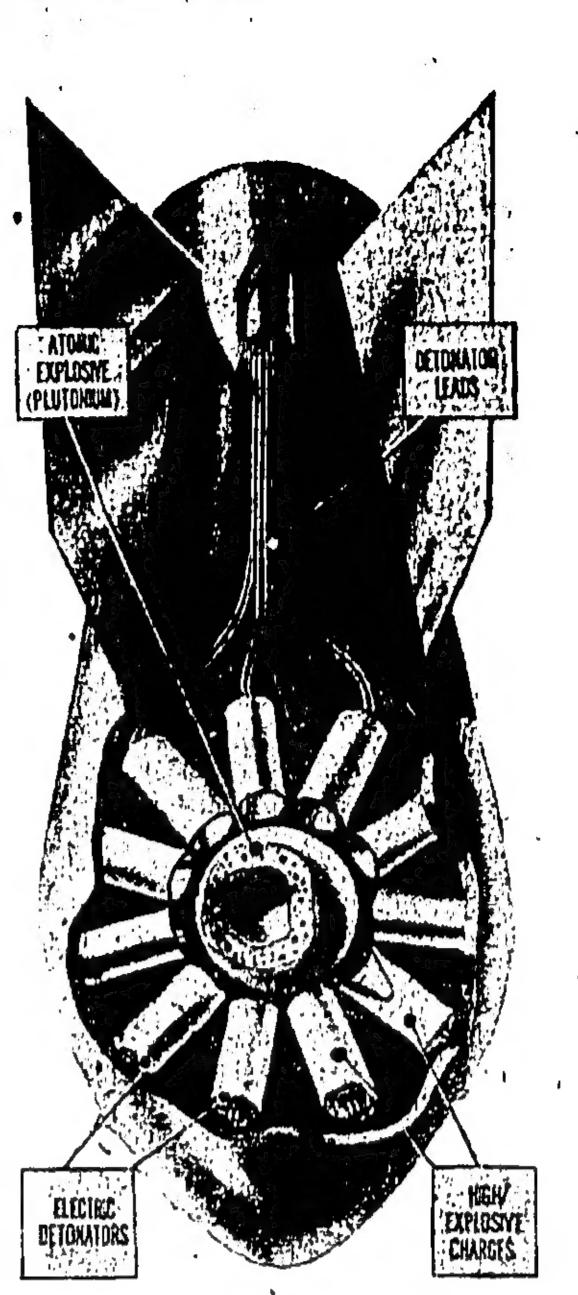

When the bomb hit the ground at Mars Bluff the shock of the impact set off the T.N.T. charges which caused the minor blast and injuries. The plutonium core, which cannot be detonated by shock, was blown out infact. It could not explode for two reasons:-

1. No Urchin had been inserted.

the same moment to produce an atomic explosion. In deliberate use this is assured by the electric detonating leasts shown in the sketch. It can never happen as a result of accidental impact, There would have been increased danger if

2. All the T.N.T. charges must go off at exactly the plutonium charge had split into small fragments. Apart from the slight radio-activity, plutonium is intensely poisonous when absorbed into the body as dust or in contaminated food. But tests with atom-ray detectors proved that no plutonium had escaped.

Cairo's under-cover war moves suddenly to its climax and a girl gives the British counter-spy a vital clue

THE ONE BLUNDER THAT BETRAYED ROWWELZS

The great battle for Africa was about to begin...and in Cairo a German spy's radio made contact with its listening post. He had to be found -and found quickly.

Thon came a clue which coused the British security forces to close in round a houseboat on the Nile. "We must get these men" the major told his troops. "And we must got them alive."

was a hot summer's morning in late July 1942. A long, thin, youngish man finished the last strokes of his before-breakfast swim and climbed up the pool steps to the terrace of the Gezira Club in Cairo.

As he fumbled around for his spectucles, he heard the voice of his wife calling him.

"Robby-hurry up, Robby! Your breakfast is here. And there's someone come to see

He waved his hand obediently, draped a towel over his shoulders, and went towards them. At the table was a dark, striking young woman, easily as tall as her husband, and beside her a man, smaller and chubbier, in tennis shorts and shirt. The chubby man was Major Alfred Sansom of Field Security.

THE STRATEGY

T WATCHED Robby exchange greetings with I them, and, as they bent their heads together and began to talk, I thought: "Who would ever guess that there, at one table, are three of the shrewdest British counteresplonage agents in the Middle East? They look as if they're planning a jumble sale. wonder what they're really up to?"

what they were planning that in Egypt.) morning was their part in the strategy that, very soon now, would trap John Eppler, the German spy. . .

For the spy in our midst (they dld not even know his name at that moment) had made the fundamental error that might well lead him before a firing squad.

The Abwehr—the German secret service-had briefed him well for his mission in Cairo; they had given him the names and addresses of scores of contacts: he spoke perfect English and Arabic and could get around freely and he had been financed for his mission with £80,000 in British sterling.

But what the Abwehr had not told Eppler was that British notes, though shops, restaurants, and hotels would willingly accept them, could not be changed into Egyptian currency through the banks. They had to be taken to the Army Paymaster's office.

CHECKED

A.S. the notes started to filter In, from night clubs and shops, hotels and brothels, the paymenter began to look at their numbers. Finally, noting their sequences, he called Field Security.

He was quite happy to unswer all my unapoken questions, He said: "My dear fellow, I know she looks like a top flight tart but I like her. She's anonymous. She's a more or less human replica of her jazzy photographs—all thigh rad uplift. I like replicas better than originals: they don't bite. Besides I must have something on my arm when I am in Town on my arm when I am in Town and I'd look a sissy carrying one of my own handbags. Anyway she's almost perfect for me. She waves good-bye, doesn't know how to cry and doesn't smother me. She's amenable, unfeeling rad quite decorative. I'd go so far as to say she's ideal. I might even marry her—make me more respectable."

I said: "The day you marry, Paul, I'll give up crime!" He smiled; "One never knows old boy,"

I said: "What does Felicity gain from this arrangement?".
"She requires me to look what she would call man-of-the-world and distinguished. And world and distinguished. And this, as you know, comes naturally to a man of my background. She also requires me to look "interesting"—that is worn and ravaged by life because she once read that men who had suffered were specially exciting and smart. This is no trouble because I drink too much and have only one kidney which doesn't work at all well." Paul had it all buttoned-up.

I went round to his flat once or twice. There was Felicity sipping pink gins, her legs curled up under her, showing her knees. She had arrived: through Paul she belonged to interna-

Horses and horticulture were the two dominating interests in life for jockey Billy Nevett throughout his 33-year-long riding career. He rode 2,287 winners in Britain, and many others in Eire—but he was just as proud of the prixe-winning blooms in his garden in the Wensleydale village of Patrick Brompton.

But now Billy, at 52, has had to give up his garden and life as a country squire because of the demands of his new role as a trainer at Newby __ Park stables, near Ripon.

"It was a wrench to leave my gardening behind, for there is nothing like that at all here," Bill tells me.

"But if you try to be a good trainer and a good gardener, they will both suffer. I had to

Who will be the Senior League's batting champion this year? Will the Hurricanes win their first championship? These questions will be answered when the curtain rings down on the 1957/8 Softball League competition which comes to an end tomorrow immediately after the final game of the season, that between the hard-luck runners-up, Al Oliveira's Warriors and the highly unpredictable Pl Dodgers.

This weekend's softball programme is an interesting one, particularly for the Hurricanes and the Warriors. Wednesday May Win Two Precious Points Over Manchester United Says ARCHIE QUICK

West Bromwich Albion's last chance of getting within striking distance of the First Division Championship comes today when they entertain their neighbours from Wolverhampton at The Hawthorns. : Albion can win this stirring Midland battle, but they will probably be kept out of second place by Preston beating lowly Leicester.

Down at the bottom of the table, Wednesday receive Manchester United, and may win two precious points because of United's midweek exertions in the FA Cup Semi-final replay. Companions in distress, Sunderland and Villa, both visit London, but while Sunderland may get a point at Chelsea, Aston will probably lose at Tottenham.

SATURDAY, MARCH 29

PORN today, you have a strong feeling for that which is just D and right. You have a great deal, of mental energy as well as strong physical staying powers. This is a combination which spella success in any lunguage! You always too the marie ethically, but you are sharp in any business deal and are not the one to get left in any negotiation. You always read the small print in any contract.

'Although you know how to make plans on a large scale, you also know how to implement them in detail. You have a pleasing personality and always seem able to get others to do the work you most dislike. In fact, they enjoy doing your chares for you. This may be due, in some measure, to the fact that you are willing to share the honours with those who assist you. You may be rather harsh with those who disagree, but for those who go along with you and stick through thick and thin, there is honour and probably wealth:

You do have a temper and can be impatient with those whose minds do not work as fast as yours. Cultivate a little more patience and tact. You must recognise that not everyone can think as accurately and at such high speed as you do. Some people need a little time to think things over.

You have an artistic appreciation and may indulge in one of the creative arts as a hobby. Should you concentrate on it as a career, you could become outstanding. Many people under your star have dual careers and find success in both.

Among those born on this date were: John Tyler, U.S. President; Raphael, the painter; Mary Miles Minter, actress; Amella Barr, author; Frank Leslie, publisher, and Warner Baxter, actor.

It might not hurl you to blow your own horn a little more. If that is impossible, then find someone who will be your own personal horn-tooter!

You have impeccable taste and enjoy all that is beautiful in life. You have a strong attachment for your own home and family and will want your surroundings to be peaceful and calm as well as beautiful. You have a tendency to underrate your own capabilities and to become despondent when your ideas do not eatch fire immediately. This results in your withdrawing into your shell even more-unless you have someone to pull you out of your black mood, pat you on the shoulder, and set you out on the right track again. Wed to someone who has the "get up and go" that you seem to lack, you can achieve exceptional results. Someone who has a thoroughly outgoing nature will bring you the most happiness throughout life.
